Artemus Ward's Last.

The following is said to have been the last thing written by Artemus Ward: "Until quite recent I've been a healthy individeoal. I'm nearly sixty, and yet I've get a muscle into my arms which don't make my fists resemble the trade of a canary bird when they fly out and hit a man. Only a few weeks ago I was exhibitin' in East Showboygan, in a buildin' which had been formerly ockepied by a pugylist—one of the feliers what hits from the shoulder, and teaches the maniy art of self-detence. And he cum and sed he was goin' in Iree in consequence of previ'sly ockepying sed buildin' with a large yeller dog. He sed 'Oh yes;' I sed 'Oh no.' He sed, 'Do you want to be ground to powder?' Ised, 'Yes, I do, if there is a powder grindist handy,' when he struck me a disgustin' blow in my left, eye, which caused that concern to close at once for repairs; but he didn't hurt me any more. I went for him energetically. His parents lived near by, and I will simply state that fitteen minutes after I had gone for him, his mother seein' the prostrate form of hear son approachin' the house hits mother seein' the prostrate form of her son approachin' the house onto a shutter, carried by four men, run cutdoors keerfully looked him over and sed, 'My son, you have been foolin' round a thrashin' masheen. You went in at the end you have been foolin' round a thrashin' masheen. You went in at the end where they put the gram in, and came out with the straw, and then got up in the thingunagig and let the horses tred on you, didn't you my son? You can imagine by this what a disagreeable person I am when I'm sagry."

Charles O'Conor on the Tweed

Case-Swindling Speculations. NEW YORK, July 16.—Judge Davis, who has sharply been criticised for passing cumulative sentences on William M. Tweed, recently wrote a letter to Chas. O'Conor, who, as senior counsel, was responsible for the conduct of the proceedsponsible for the conduct of the proceedings against Tweed, calling attention to the fact that the Court of Appeals in reversing these sentences relied principally on the arguments made by O'Conor in an earlier day, and asking why O'Conor had not called his attention to O'Conor had not called his attention to this argument.

The reply of O'Conor is published this morning, in which he severely criticised the action of the higher Court and takes occasion to defend at length the conduct of the Ring suits and expresses surprise and regret at the legal triumph of Tweed's counsel.

He defends Judge Davis' action in sentencing Tweed, and says that a proper application of the rule, which the Court of Appeals has abolished, would be a series of trials on successive indictments measuring out justice to the great speculator in regular installments, but that the present effect of this is to shield a great public thief from punishment for his offenses.

Pamphlets were also circulated containing particulars of the modus operandi, the explanation being plausibly a constructed theory of speculation, and claiming that operators have combinations by which failure is impossible.

One woman in Philadelphia has written to the President of the Stock Exchange, saying that she had sent $160 to a *mm here, and asking information, as the firm informed her the money had been lost in speculation.

The President replied he could do nothing for her. A number of letters received show that the victims to the fraud are numerous, and extend to all parts of the country.

HARTFORD, CT., July 16.—The Assembly, by a vote of 101 to 80, has passed the bill permitting an increase of not less than 35 nor more than 45 members to the Senate. Of these, Mr. Seasongood, Joshua Gibson, W. C. Smith and Mr. Heidelbach were excused for various reasons. Mr. Lackman also wished to be excused, stating that he was an honor ry mamber of the German Battalion.

He presented a diploma of 1871, but the

He presented a diploma of 1871, but the Court held that that organization was now defunct, and therefore Mr. Luck-man could not be excused on the grounds claimed.

The following bystanders were then chosen to fit up the jury: T. J. White. Thomas F. Kelly, John T. Watson and Ed. K. Klemmer.

The jury now being full the counsel for the lary now being full the counsel for the defense proceeded to exercise the right of challenge. Among the questions which were put were whether any mem-ber of the jury had formed an opinion, or was prejudiced against any of the parties to the sult, or was any relation to them.

The questien, whether any member had expressed an opinion as to the liability of an individual member of Council in contracting debts for the city, was objected to by the Counsel on the other side.
